INTRODUCTION.

The chapel of Esh stands on the long ridge which separates the valleys of the Browney and the Derness, tributaries of the Wear. It lies about four miles westward of Durham, and within sight of the cathedral towers. The first known reference to the chapel of Esh is in the charter of 1283, by which bishop Beck applied the revenues of Lanchester rectory to the maintenance of a college of canons. The three chapels of Esh, Medomsley and Satley were then existing, but probably all of them are of considerably earlier date. The prebend of Esh was the first of seven constituting the Lanchester college, and it was the duty of the canon, who received this endowment, to see that the chapel was duly served. In 1313 John chaplain of Esh, is mentioned; and in 1342 the ordination of William, son of William, on the title of v. marks guaranteed by Simon de Esh, seems to furnish us with a second name. At the dissolution and sequestration of the estates of Lanchester college in 1545, small pensions were reserved for the curates of Lanchester and of the chapelries. The incumbent or perpetual curate of Lanchester became also curate of Esh and Satley, and, as a pluralist, supplied as best he might the spiritual necessities of his scattered flocks. In 1768 Esh and Satley each received augmentation from Queen Ann's bounty and other accidental sources, so that these joint benefices were henceforth held separately from Lanchester and with cure of souls. In 1834 still further benefactions enabled Esh and Satley each to possess a resident incumbent and to become self-contained parishes.

Although many times renewed the fabric of Esh church seems always to have had the same foundations and the same simple plan. It consists of a nave and chancel of equal width and under the same roof, together with a southern transept or porch, 'St. Helens porch,' as it is called in the register (page 22). The only clear evidences of antiquity are the piscina on the south side of the chancel, which was discovered in 1889, and a recumbent statue of a lady with the whimple, said to be a member of the Esshe family, and of 14th century work. There is also a stone effigy of a chrisom child. The one bell has an inscription MARIA GRATIANA 1695. There is a sundial of uncertain date, and now very much weather-worn, upon the south wall of the transept. The letters were cut upon a large square stone which appears to have been placed immediately over the lintel of a door of entrance now blocked up. The communion cup and paten are each of them inscribed *Donum Curie Consistorialis Dunelm' Ad Capella' de Esh A.D. 1712. The hall marks show that they were made in Newcastle in 1711. The area of the present parish is 3026 acres, and the population (which in 1801 was 276), is now about 5000, scattered in distinct villages over the whole area. The increase has been due to the rapid development of the coal mining industry. There are pits in each of the valleys, and a small land sale at Hilltop.

The old farm names are Esh Hall, Low Esh, Flass, Hag House, Heugh, Newhouse, Greenland, Underside, Finings, Lowside, Wallnook, Hill-top, Ushaw. The Roman road called Watling Street runs through the parish from the Flass to Heugh farm and onwards to Lanchester.

The following is a list of the vicars according to Surtees, though it is not certainly correct or complete:—

The present volume reproduces in a permanent form the contents of four original register books. Each of these is described in detail as it is reached in its chronological order. The first of them is self-contained for the period which it covers, viz. : 1567-1695. [The note of the Reverend Jos. Thompson (page 62), which says 1596-1695 is manifestly incorrect.] The second book in like manner has christenings and burials in regular order; but with respect to the marriages, careful comparison with volume iv. (publications and marriages 1754-1812), must be made to ensure an approximation to accuracy. Towards the end of the last century there appears to have been a falling off in the care bestowed upon these entries. Possibly some missing ones may be found incorporated with the Lanchester register. It will be observed that there are no burials given for the years 1798 or 1799, although it is certain that some took place. Three leaves of parchment have been cut out at the end of the book, but as the last page (after entry on November 10, 1797) has sufficient blank space to contain the writing necessary for the burials of two average years, it does not seem likely that any entries have been lost. Notwithstanding this, we read in Buller's 'Record and Recollections of St. Cuthbert's College, Ushaw' (page 60), that the ancient and venerable priest, the Reverend Ferdinando Ashmall, who had charge for so many years of the (R.C) Mission at Newhouse, died on February 5, 1798, aged 104; and 'was buried at Esh, in the graveyard of the Protestant chapel,' which may very well have been the case, seeing that his predecessor, the Reverend Robert Carnaby, was buried there on October 4, 1740. There are also gravestones recording burials in 1798 and 1799.

The last of the original volumes contains baptisms from 1798-1812, and burials from 1800-1812.

Although, not supplying us with any considerable number of entries likely to prove of more than parochial interest, it will at least be a matter of satisfaction that another of these invaluable records has escaped manifold dangers, which have caused the loss of so many more important ones, and has found a practically endless existence among the publications of a learned society. It may perhaps be permitted to the editor to say here that within a week or two of his taking legal possession of these registers they were appealed to by representatives of the claimants to, and the present holders of the historic Duxberry estate, to establish or to refute a supposed descent from Anthony Hall, of Flass, esq^{re}. This Duxberry is familiar to every reader of Longfellow's 'Courtship of Miles Standish', and lies within a few miles of the editor's former curacy at Leyland, in Lancashire.

It only remains to acknowledge with thanks the favour shown by the society, at whose expence this volume is printed, in accepting the Esh register as its first publication of the kind for the county of Durham. The courtesy of the secretary (Mr. Blair), through whose hands the proofs have passed, has made the task a most agreeable one.

W.S.W.

THE REGISTERS OF THE PARISH OF ESH IN THE COUNTY OF DURHAM.

The first volume of the Esh Parish Registers is a parchment book (14 inches long by 6 inches broad) in its original cover of thin parchment. It consists, at present, of 24 leaves, which have been paged by some person in comparatively recent times—probably by the individual who made an entry on the inside of cover “Copied August 21st, 1805.” As the letters are of the form used in Court hand, we may perhaps identify this individual as the Revd. J. Hodgson (the Historian of Northumberland), who was ordained to the Sub-Curacy of Esh and Satley on June 3, 1804. Previously, however, the Register seems to have been badly treated, for two pages have been cut away at the commencement of the Weddings, and two before the Burials. On the fragments of these last two pages there are traces of regular writing, similar to the entries which follow.

August 20th 1805".

Two leaves have been cut away from this part of the book at some early time. One leaf, apparently, had no writing upon it; the margin of the other which remains shows traces of names in regular lines. Hence we conclude that the entries of burial commenced at least as early as 1567.]

[End of volume I.]

VOLUME II.

The second volume of the Esh register consists of twenty-eight leaves of parchment, measuring 12 inches by 11 inches, and is enclosed in what may be the original parchment covered millboard. The writing runs parallel to the longer sides, and is for the most part in three columns. The first three pages contain christenings, burials, and marriages, in parallel columns, but this plan was abandoned and entries are afterwards found, under these respective headings, in different parts of the book. Some of the writing is so illiterate, and the arrangement of the entries so irregular, that the words and their proper order can only with great difficulty be made out. For the sake of convenience, the christenings have been taken in regular succession to the end, and then births of papists and dissenters as contained on the last leaf of the volume. The marriages and burials follow after the same manner.

VOLUME III.

Volume III is bound in rough calf and consists of $62\frac{1}{2}$ leaves, measuring 14 inches by $8\frac{1}{2}$ inches, of parchment, the Baptisms at one end of the book and the Burials at the other. The Baptisms occupy twenty-two pages, each entry with particulars being carried across two pages, the first page and the greater part of pp. 22 and 23 being blank. The next nineteen leaves are blank but half of the ninth leaf has been cut away. Pages 64 and 65 have some entries of births of Roman Catholics. Thenceforward (pp. 66-115) are blanks until the entries of Burials are reached, which commence at the other end; of these there are ten pages. The writing throughout is very large and distinct. There is a piece of paper secured to the inside of the cover on which is written—

“ The following is the copy of an answer from the Rev^d Jos : Thompson to a request of mine that he would give me a list of all Register Books in his possession belonging to the Chapelry of Esh ”

[Esh Registers.

It appears perfect and in decent preservation.
